WHEN LOUES WON MARATHON RACE

Native Hero Got Great Reception at the Finish.

Down the track came Loues, the hero of Greece. His eyes were deep-set—hollow they looked—and his mouth open as if he could not get breath, but his legs were moving, and through all his weariness he smiled. And with one earlness he smiled. And with one weariness he similar with the stage of his country. GIRL—At once, a reliable house girl, Glory to Greece! Was it not magnificent! Soul-weary, his very marrow marrow to soliton; it must be but strength and Washington st. nw. aching, it must be, but strength and courage he had summoned to wave the "A man? No, a god! Soul of the ceaseless commotion of the surging GIRL—General housework; go home nights sea, the incessant roaring, and the leaping and struggling multitude. "Loues! GIRL-White; for housework; small family, Loues! Loues of Marousi! Zeito! Zeito! no washing or ironing. 808 5th nw. it

The crown prince, with Prince George the statuesque, and minor princes with the royal suite, rushed up to meet him at the entrance, and, circling about, they ran with him the last steps of the statuesque, and the last steps of the statuesque, and circling about, white or colored; to go to Glencarlyn, Va. 3100 M nw. race, the length of the Stadium Urack, with arms extended, awaiting the moment when he should cross that they might grasp him. And as he passed along, men and women, young and old, ancient grandmothers and panting girls leaned forward from their seats as it to draw him to them. The wealth they showered! Money, jewels, gold; one a diamond-studded watch. But to all this he paid no attention, only as he crossed the line and his form was enveloped in a shower of rose-leaves, he turned to where he knew Euripides and Gouskous and Marie should be sitting and, though he could not see them, smiled—the smile of a man who is tired to death, but such a smile that all who saw cheered for the blessing of it.

Carried in Arms.

Not a step beyond the finish line was he allowed to run. They bore him off the earth, the crown prince and his suite. Carried him up the steps, lifted him up bodily and stood him up where and he a Greek peasant-and told him testing hand:

t there, your majesty, but at this
if it pleases you," and on the right
he order was pinned. That heart that was sacred to Marie's token.
